Once upon a time there was a prince who wanted to (1) a princess; but she would have to be a real princess. He traveled all over the world to find one, but nowhere could he get (2) he wanted. There were princesses enough, but it was (3) to find out whether they were real ones. There was always something (4) them that was not as it should be. (5) he came home again and was sad, for he would have liked very much to have a real princess.

One evening a terrible (6) came on; there was thunder and lightning, and the rain poured down in torrents. Suddenly a knocking was heard at the city gate, and the old king (7) to open it.

It was a princess (8) out there in front of the gate. But, good gracious! What a sight the rain and the wind had made her look. The water ran down from her hair and clothes; it ran down (9) the toes of her shoes and out again at the heels. And yet she said that she was a real princess. The queen planned to test her by letting her sleep on a thick bed under which a pea would be placed. But the prince did not want to bother with the test because he was desperate to find a wife. So he married her (10).
